“Everything changes in this moment” – The startling and entertaining true story of early 1900’s astronomer Henrietta Leavitt

Performance Dates: January 14 - 23, 2022

NOTE: MATINEES ON JAN. 15, 16, 22 & 23: 4 pm
(No show on Monday, January 17)

Seated: Debra Bowers and Lynn Gutstad
Standing: Donna Burroughs, Randy Warren and Kathleen Morris

Henrietta Leavitt, a real-life scientist, makes a discovery that changes astronomy forever... all before women were even allowed to vote. Working at the Harvard Observatory, she researched a type of stars, called cepheids, whose brightness constantly fluctuate. Through careful study of thousands of photographs of the cepheids, Henrietta calculated the time it took for the stars to go from bright to dim. Her measurements helped scientists determine how far away the stars are from Earth. Her research on luminosity informed the work of Edwin Hubble and countless others. Even today, we use her findings to help us understand the expanse of the universe.
