

HIRING A MUSICIAN ?

OR ASKING THEM TO PERFORM AT YOUR EVENT ?

What you think you're paying for:

- Someone to perform some music.

What you are actually paying for:

- Someone to perform some music, plus:
 - Equipment and instruments.
 - Hours of rehearsal time.
 - Rehearsal space.
 - Transportation to and from the venue.
 - The amount of money spent on lessons and training to become the musicians that they are.
 - Promotion and website costs.
 - The percentages that goes to income taxes.
 - Telephone and Internet bills spent organizing the performance and its rehearsals.
 - Any manager, agent, or other booking fees.
 - Insurance.

Not to mention...

- The payment also has to cover food, housing, bills, and all other living expenses

Still think that offering "exposure" and experience is a fair price?

You wouldn't expect a plumber, carpenter, hairdresser, doctor, dentist, optician, electrician, chef, mechanic, dressmaker or shop owner to work for free, would you?
